

American Society of Clinical Oncologists - Clinical Trials Specialist

Description

As the world's leading professional organization representing physicians who treat people with cancer, ASCO is committed to advancing the education of oncologists and other oncology professionals, to advocating for policies that provide access to high-quality cancer care, and to supporting the clinical trials system and the need for increased clinical and translational research

We are currently seeking a Clinical Trials Specialist to assist with our mission of making a world of difference in cancer care. Our technically progressive culture offers the opportunity to join enthusiastic and passionate professionals who are working to advance science, technology, and medicine in order to help people live better lives.

The responsibilities listed below will support the development and implementation of ASCO's programs in the areas of policy and cancer research.

Analyze existing and proposed regulations, legislation, policies and guidance related to cancer research

Assist in the implementation and development of ASCO's programs and activities related to research programs, particularly in a community setting

Prepare written and oral reports/updates for ASCO publications and ASCO members, serve as a resource for members on topics related to cancer research and the implementation of clinical trials

Develop and maintain strategic relationships with key stakeholder organizations and federal agencies (particularly the National Cancer Institute) in the cancer research policy arena

If you have the ability to manage details while remaining cognizant of the bigger picture, and would enjoy incorporating your scientific and critical thinking skills with project management, join ASCO to experience the rewards of working for a successful, stable, forward-thinking organization that values the professional development of its employees.
